THE SPRINGS.

From the White Salphur. [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.] WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. VA., ?

August 14, 1875. My "tantalized spirit here blandly reposes," and will so continue for several days, Providence permitting. Of my trip hither I have little to relate. It would have been common-place indeed had not the weather been so changeable--constantly varying from shower to sunshine-as to draw from the passengers those delightfully brilliant remarks usual on such occasions. Some genius ought to get up a cyclopedia of "best thoughts" on rainy weather. It would be equally good reading as the average Patent Office Report, and would cost the Government less. Passengers on railroad trains could furnish half the material for the book.

I observe that the westward-bound trains of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad stop at Gordonsville but ten minutes. They halt at Charlottesville twenty minutes. There the hungry traveller is expected to get his dinner, if he has money enough and cares to invest it that way. This arrangement is an indignity that Gordonsville will not be slow to resent, as it is indirectly a reflection upon the excellency of her chicken-legs. I know not son, R. W. Hudgins, Dr. P. L. Wormley, what other gentlemen may think, but as for me my stomach yearns towards Gordonsville; and I long to see the day when she Rev. Dr. J. William Jones. shall be restored to her rights.

The growing crops on the road from Richmond to the White Sulphur look good. I never saw finer corp. Tobocco appeared vigorous and promising. As for grass, if it could only be cut and cured Virginia would siders. But, unhappily, they can make hay only when the sun shines.

Nothing can be more lovely than the appearnce of the country at this season. Everything of a vegetable nature is green and luxurian'. Even poor farms wear a look that must carry encouragement to the farmers and convince everybody that "there's life in the old land yet.'

The Chesapeake and Ohio railroad is quite a pleasant route of travel. The scenery is often sublime, but strangers passing over its length in Virginia would carry away with a monotonous and wearisome life we would bled. The sociability among guests is rethem more favorable impressions if so many back lots did not abut upon the railroad As it was impossible for the railroad to be spell is no doubt general, and all the springs run in front of everybody's house, the state people get a full benefit. They go to the as old friends. The number of guests we of things I complain of will continue for an springs for water, and literally get it this seaindefinite time to come, and more's the pity. son from the earth and from the clouds. THE WHITE.

I find here over nine hundred guests, representing most of the States of the Union and not a few of the nations of the earth. I heard before I left kichmond that there were between eight and nine hundred people here, All classes can say something, but none can but I confess I was a little incredulous. I stop it. knew the habit was, whenever there was a Springs the benefit thereof to the amount of by magic, of seemingly incurable diseases; its bank, at the Warm Springs, had a house convinced that we have at least nine hun- attractions for enjoyment and recreation, the dred-indeed, many say there are 1,000-pre- "spring-goers" can afford to get an occasent, but I prefer to be on the sate side, and sional drenching from a summer's cloud, or not give room for the questioning of my ve- otherwise their happiness and pleasures

FRESH WATER.

They have had their share of rain here, but it has not been without good effect. I have always considered the visitors to the White a little inclined to be stiff-stately perhaps would be better. The imposibility of getting out of doors during many portions of the day has forced them to become sociable and agreable, and to cultivate the acquaintance of one another. And now that the clouds promise to give way to hot sunshine, the ceremonials abandoned in the wet spells will scarcely be relastituted.

The other day there was a rain heavier than usual. The mountain torrents came down with unwonted velocity, and Howard's creek, ordinarily a tame stream, got beside itself. The water, overflowing its banks, crushed to pieces the carpenter-shop and swept through the bath-house, and did considerable damage thereto; in consequence of which business at the bath-house was for some days suspended. The same flood came near engulfing the washerwomen at the laundry. The bath-house at " Beauregard" (formerly Mr. J. A. Cowardin's place) was washed away off into the meadow.

LEGISLATIVE.

Speaker Hanger is one of the visitors. Colonel Crittenden, assistant Sergeant-at-Arms of the House, is in charge of the dining-room. Mr. McClung, one of the House committee clerks, is engaged in a responsible clerical capacity. Mr. Bernard Peyton is the clerk of one branch of the West Virginia Legislature, and Mr. Rand, book keeper, is a committee-clerk in the West Virginia Legislature. We have several legislators here, and if need be could organize a highly respectable legislative body on the spot, Seeing Crittenden walking up and down the dining-room when the clatter of the plates and knives is loudest, and people are bustling about most, I confidently expect him to say, in his sharp, soldierly voice : " Silence in the lobby. Gentlemen, take your seats." But he is not as absent-minded as your correspondent; if he was, he would have made the mistake many times.

If there are any candidates about they keep quiet, and instead of soliciting votes of the men supplicate the approving smiles of the ladies. Speaking of candidates reminds me of a story told by a friend, -a veracious reporter-who, journeying up Franklin street from the Police Court, stopped at the laundry of Thompson Chow, the representative of the Celesticl Empire in Rienmond. My friend had heard that Chow was a candidate, and he asked him point blank if he intended to run for the Legislature. The Celestial innocently said he didn't know where the Legislature was. My friend replied, "The Legislature is place where you have nothing to do, and can make plenty of money." which proves, if nothing else, that a China- passed a tolerably good road-law. Why not man will "accept the situation" as readily as put it into practical operation?

this season. Every effort is used here by those in charge to add to the comforts, pleasures, convenience, and health of the guests. We have a good many young ladies here, and nearly all are au fait in the Terpsichorean art. The day has not been definitely fixed for the grand dress-ball to come off this season.

There are here from your city Colonel W. P. Munford and wife, W. G. Miller, Esq., O. L. Cottrell, Esq., Colonel W. E. Binford, Captain Coke and wife, Colonel W. C. Knight, Dr. S. P. Moore, E. G. The meeting of the Executive Committee of the Virginia State Agricultural Society came off here this week. The usual routine of business was transacted. In place of Colonel J. D. H. Ross, of Lexington, vice-president, who resigned, William T. Scott, Esq., of Charlotte county, was elected. Resolu-tions in memory of General Pickett, one of the president's aids, were passed.

The next Annual Fair will be held at the Society's grounds, near Richmond, the 26th, 27th, 28th, and 29th of October. This will be the fifteenth exhibition of the Society. While here, interesting speeches on agriculture were delivered in the ball-room by President Knight, Judge Wood Bouldin, Major Sutherlin, and Judge A. D. Dickin-

Unusual interest will be taken by the people of this section in the next exhibition. Heretofore, from a variety of causes, they have manifested no great interest, and contributed very little in way of stock, implements, manufactures, or farm products. Under more favorable auspices it is hoped their contributions will be largely increased and highly creditable.

Mecklenburg is a grand old county, with population noted for hospitality, intelligence, and solid worth; fertile lands, broad rivers, and rich valleys; a varied soil, capable of producing the finest tobacco, cereals, vegetables, and fruits ; but with the most intolerable roads a vehicle ever passed over. How can they expect immigration and good conveyances unless they improve their roads? Advise them, Mr. Editor, for their own welfare and safety; for the good of the people who are fortunate enough to visit their county on business or pleasure; for the poor, dumb animal stumbling over rocks, stumps, and gulleys; for the saving to the travellers and farmers of innumerable coach, wheelwright, and blacksmiths' bills, to collect all the available force in the county and repair their public highways. The White, the Jordan, or Rockbridge Alum may excel this place in numbers, but the home-like appearance of everything here, the pains taken by the proprietor, Mr. Chesley Kinney, to put every one at ease, and the manner in which he succeeds, are among the R. S. T. charms of these springs.

From the Bealing. Covington, August 16, 1875. Editors of the Dispatch: We have just arrived here from the Healing Springs, where we have been sojourning for a while. We were delighted with our visit to the Healing. The former reputation is fully sustained by Mr. Bishop, the present proprietor. In fact, we think that his management is hard to surpass. The company is larger than at this time last year notwithstanding the rainy season, which has been quite long; but it is to be hoped that it is now over. Rains do not affect the walks and drives at the Healing as much as in the mountains generally. It being a limestone formation, soon absorbs moisture, and dries quickly. The company Still it rains-it pours. Did you ever see such is from all parts of the country, and a better looking class of guests we never saw assemstrangers, who meet as strangers but part left there was about one bundred and seventyfive. Nice weather will greatly increase the thary. The work there is suffering for want number; and as Mr. Bishop expects to keep open until frost drives his company away, we would advise those who have been kept back by the rains to go now and enjoy the most delightful part of the whole season. Our experience is that from the 15th of September to the 15th of October is the choicest part of the year in the mountains. We learned that there was a good company at nearly full; and well does he deserve a large patronage. No man tries harder to please his guests than he, and none succeed better, for we have yet to hear any complaint from the many thousands who have during ten years been fortunate enough to fall into his hands. And those who have been fortunate enough to fall into his delightfut bath (surpassed by none in the world) we dare not venture to give expression to what we have heard them say of its recuperative virtues and exhilarating effects. We are satisfied it is worth a trip across the continent and oceans to inlulge in such a luxury. LOCAL MATTERS.

HOW SPENCER MORRIS THREW A BARY OUT OF THE WINDOW .- Spencer Morris, about ringerbread color, was called in the Police lourt yesterday to answer the charge of unlawfully and feloniously throwing Joseph White, infant child of Felicia Harris, from a window, &c. This was the case mentioned in the paper yesterday. Spencer came up much excited, but looking very repentant. The witness told the old, old story. "The poor fellow had taken a little too much. One witness, a colored girl to whom Spencer had probably been paying his respects, and who saw the whole affair, which created so much excitement in Rutherfoord's row as well as in other parts of the city, stepped up to give her testimony. She wanted to take Spencer's part evidently, although a Commonwealth witness. Her story was short She had nursed the child to sleep and laid it on the bed. Spencer had been sleeping off the effects of his little frolic on the same bed but got up without seeing the baby, and thinking that the bed needed sun and air, which possibly was the case, quietly rolled up the mattress, infant and all, and slung it out of a two-story window. That settled the matter with the Justice. Spencer pleaded that he didn't mean to hurt the baby-didn't even know that the baby was on the bed The Justice thought he ought to have known it, and gave him sixty days to repent of his folly unless he sooner gave $300 security.

LEG AND ARM BROKEN .- Bertha Corsely, young man from Manchester, was caught by the band of a fly-wheel while on duty at the Vulcan Iron-Works, and had his right arm and right leg badly broken. Dr. Z.
